ODNI News Release No. 08-08

ODNI Launches New Web Site

The Office of the Director of National Intelligence today launched a re-designed Web site featuring expanded content, improved navigation tools and a new digital subscription service.

The site's fresh content includes a Frequently Asked Questions section and a gallery of photographs suitable for use by news organizations. Both are supported by an innovative design and enhanced graphics. A digital subscription management feature offers users multiple ways to receive the latest news and information, tailored to personal preferences. An RSS feed, for instance, pushes real time information to cell phones, Web browsers or personal digital assistants.

An additional service sends instant e-mail alerts when new information is posted. Both features allow subscribers to target updates to content of their choosing, such as congressional testimony, speeches or new documents posted to the ODNI's Reading Room.

Navigating the Web site has been made easier, especially for first-time visitors. Links are more intuitive, and are designed to require no more than "three clicks" to find information. To view the new site or sign up for the subscription service, visit www.dni.gov.

The Director of National Intelligence oversees 16 federal organizations that make up the U.S. intelligence community. The DNI also manages the implementation of the National Intelligence Program. Additionally, the DNI serves as the principal adviser to the president, the National Security Council and the Homeland Security Council on intelligence issues related to national security.
